

Contents

Introduction	1
Cynthia Willis-Esqueda and Brian H. Bornstein
Larry Wrightsman: A Pioneer in Injecting Social-Psychological Knowledge Into the Legal System	9
John C. Brigham
Psychological Science on Eyewitness Identification and the U.S. Supreme Court: Reconsiderations in Light of DNA-Exonerations and the Science of Eyewitness Identification	17
Laura Smalarz, Sarah M. Greathouse, Gary L. Wells, and Karen A. Newirth
The Credibility of Witnesses	41
Stanley L. Brodsky and Ekaterina Pivovarova
False Confessions: From Colonial Salem, Through Central Park, and into the Twenty-First Century	53
Saul M. Kassin
Identifying Juror Bias: Moving from Assessment and Prediction to a New Generation of Jury Selection Research	75
Margaret Bull Kovera and Jacqueline L. Austin
Race and Its Place in the United States Legal System	95
Cynthia Willis-Esqueda
Law and Social Science: How Interdisciplinary Is Interdisciplinary Enough?	113
Brian H. Bornstein
From War Protestors to Corporate Litigants: The Evolution of the Profession of Trial Consulting	129
Amy J. Posey

Undergraduate Education in Law and Psychology	153
Edie Greene and Kirk Heilbrun
Reflections on Psychology and Law	171
Lawrence S. Wrightsman
Index.....	175