

Contents

1 Preliminaries . . . . .	1
1.1 Introduction . . . . .	1
1.1.1 What This Book Aims To Be, and What It Does Not Aim To Be . . . . .	3
1.2 Why Stipulate More Definitions? . . . . .	4
1.3 Overview . . . . .	5
References . . . . .	6
2 Sovereignty in the Law . . . . .	9
2.1 Legal Concepts . . . . .	11
2.2 Inferential Analysis of “Sovereignty” in International Law . . . . .	16
2.3 Inferential Analysis of “Sovereignty” in National Law . . . . .	22
2.3.1 Consequences of MCDS . . . . .	25
2.3.2 Attributed to State or State Organ? . . . . .	29
2.3.3 Attributed to the People? . . . . .	30
2.4 Implications . . . . .	32
References . . . . .	35
3 Sovereignty Outside of the Law . . . . .	37
3.1 Constitutive Sovereignty Is Extra-Legal . . . . .	38
3.2 The Core of Constitutive Sovereignty (MCVS) . . . . .	40
3.2.1 The State and the Legal System Emanate from the People . . . . .	41
3.2.2 Excursion: Social Conventions and Social Rules . . . . .	47
3.2.3 Defining the People . . . . .	57
3.2.4 The Two Sides of Municipal Constitutive Sovereignty . . . . .	61
3.2.5 Intermediate Conclusion: Municipal Constitutive Sovereignty So Far . . . . .	62
3.3 Implications of This Conception . . . . .	63
3.3.1 Sovereignty as a Matter of Degree . . . . .	63
3.3.2 Exclusivity . . . . .	64
3.3.3 Constitutive Sovereignty and Legitimacy . . . . .	65

3.4	International Constitutive Sovereignty (ICVS) . . . . .	69
3.4.1	States Constitute International Law . . . . .	70
3.4.2	Social Rule or Contract? . . . . .	73
3.4.3	Who Is Sovereign (ICVS)? . . . . .	75
3.4.4	Concluding Remarks . . . . .	76
	References . . . . .	77
4	Questions About Sovereignty . . . . .	81
4.1	Relationship Between Sovereignities . . . . .	82
4.1.1	Constituted and Constitutive . . . . .	82
4.1.2	National Constituted and International Constitutive . . . . .	83
4.1.3	International Constituted Sovereignty and National Constitutive Sovereignty . . . . .	85
4.1.4	The Impact of Mastery on Sovereignty . . . . .	86
4.1.5	Concluding Remarks . . . . .	91
4.2	Is the Concept of Sovereignty Necessary? . . . . .	92
4.3	Sovereignty Relative to What? . . . . .	94
4.4	Limited or Not? . . . . .	95
	References . . . . .	96
5	Sovereignty in Context . . . . .	99
5.1	Sovereignty and Secession: Scotland, Catalonia, and Quebec . . . . .	100
5.1.1	Catalonia . . . . .	101
5.1.2	Quebec . . . . .	104
5.1.3	Scotland . . . . .	105
5.2	Municipal Constituted Sovereignty and the European Union . . . . .	107
5.2.1	Are the Member States of the European Union Still Sovereign? . . . . .	107
5.2.2	Is the European Union Sovereign? . . . . .	108
5.3	Not the People but God? . . . . .	112
5.4	Humanitarian Intervention . . . . .	114
5.5	The Role of Recognition . . . . .	117
5.6	Concluding Remarks . . . . .	121
	References . . . . .	122
6	Other Accounts . . . . .	125
6.1	Monarchical Sovereignty . . . . .	126
6.1.1	Jean Bodin's Theory of Sovereignty . . . . .	126
6.1.2	Thomas Hobbes' Theory of Sovereignty . . . . .	130
6.1.3	Concluding Remarks: Monarchical Sovereignty . . . . .	132
6.2	Parliamentary Sovereignty . . . . .	133
6.2.1	Dicey's Theory of Parliamentary Sovereignty . . . . .	133
6.2.2	Goldsworthy's Theory of Parliamentary Sovereignty . . . . .	137
6.2.3	Concluding Remarks: Parliamentary Sovereignty . . . . .	143
6.3	Popular Sovereignty . . . . .	143
6.3.1	The Indian Conception of Popular Sovereignty . . . . .	144

6.3.2	The Australian Conception of Popular Sovereignty . . . . .	147
6.3.3	The German Conception of Popular Sovereignty . . . . .	149
6.3.4	Concluding Remarks: Popular Sovereignty . . . . .	150
6.4	State Sovereignty . . . . .	151
6.4.1	Hans Kelsen . . . . .	151
6.4.2	Chinese Sovereignty . . . . .	156
6.4.3	Concluding Remarks: State Sovereignty . . . . .	158
6.5	Concluding Remarks . . . . .	159
	References . . . . .	160
7	Conclusion . . . . .	163
7.1	Constitutive Sovereignty . . . . .	163
7.2	Constituted Sovereignty . . . . .	167
7.3	A Look to the Future . . . . .	168