

Table of Contents

List of Abbreviations	xv
Introduction. An American Project	1
1. The Research Question and its Relevance to Current Debates on the History of International Law	1
2. Earlier Scholarship on Scott	4
3. Scott's Spanish Origin, Equality, and the Canon of International Legal History	6
4. Descriptive Writing and Language Choices	10
5. Structure and Outline of Chapters	12
Prologue. The Education of James Brown Scott, 1866–1896	17
1. Jimmy the Book Snatcher	19
2. “To Freeman Snow who first taught me to love International Law and, in doing so, to love him.”	20
3. “Between ourselves, I have been delivering that address ever since”	22
PART I. THE RISE AND FALL OF JAMES BROWN SCOTT AND THE TURN TO UNITED STATES HISTORY, 1898–1921
1 Explaining Scott's Turn to American History	33
1. Young Professional, 1898–1906	33
A Different Kind of World Power	33
Mainstreaming International Law	38
2. Root's Legal Advisor, 1906–1910	42
The American International Law Reshaping Foreign Policy: Scott at the State Department	42
Jumpstarting a Powerhouse: Scott at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace	45
3. Powerful Organizer, 1910–1917	49
Scott's Early Projects at CEIP	49
Scott's Turn to History and the New World Order	54
2 International Law as Faith. The Cuban Intervention and the Narrative of 1898	57
1. James Brown Scott in Havana: International Law and the Selfless Empire	58

xii TABLE OF CONTENTS

Science, International Law, and the Social Context: The Platt Amendment as Equality	61
2. The Narrative of 1898: The Religious Foundation of the Cuban Intervention	64
Before the War: Public Opinion, Humanitarianism, and Religious Discourse	64
International Law as Civilization and the Religious Discourse: The Platt Amendment as Selflessness	70
3. “The Best Friend of Cuba”: Scott’s Messianism between Hegemony and Equality	72
Messianism and Ingratitude	72
The Platt Amendment and the Soul of America	77
3 International Law as Science. Scott’s Historical Case for Adjudication and the Fight against Collective Security	87
1. The Armistice Books and the Science of International Adjudication	88
James Brown Scott and the Politics of the American Constitution	90
The Case Method and the Ideology of Legal Evolution	93
International Law as Law	99
2. The United States as Universal History: Scott’s Recurring Themes in Legal Progress	103
Public Opinion as Sanction: The Case for Adjudication against Collective Security	103
Universal Rule of Law and American Expansionism	108
Imperialism and Equality	110
3. The Losing Quest against Collective Security and the Decline of Scott’s Legalism	114
The Emergence of Collective Security and the League to Enforce Peace	114
Fighting Collective Security within the Administration: Scott and Lansing versus Wilson	119
Defeating the Covenant in the Senate: Root versus Wilson	121
PART II. REWRITING INTERNATIONAL LEGAL HISTORY: VITORIA AND THE NEW WORLD, 1925–1939
4 The Spanish Origin of International Law	127
1. The Spanish Origin’s Background	127
Setting the Canon: The Inception of the Classics of International Law Series	127
Turning to Salamanca: Scott’s Evolving Thought and the Early Classics	132
Scott and the Salamanca Scholars	136
2. Conceiving the Campaign: Scott’s Long Road to Salamanca	140

The Dutch Connection: From The Hague to Salamanca	140
The Making of Founders: From Grotius to Vitoria	146
Diverging Formulations of Postwar International Law: Scott's Declining Position in the US Professional Community	151
Vitoria at Georgetown: Scott's 1926 Course on the Founders of International Law	154
3. The Lessons of the Spanish Origin: Vitoria, Suárez, and the International Law of the Twentieth Century	161
"Spain, for me the Holy Land of International Law": Scott's 1927 First Visit to Salamanca	161
Putting the Argument on Paper: Scott's First Book on the Spanish Origin	167
Vitoria and the Modern International Law	172
Suárez and the Philosophy of International Law	178
"The Ripened Fruit": The Spanish Origin Campaign Looking Forward	183
5 The Catholic Conception of International Law	186
1. Early Approaches: Scott and the Catholic Church before the Great War	186
American Catholicism at the Turn of the Twentieth Century	186
CEIP and the Pontifical Letter of 1911	191
2. The Background of the Catholic Conception	199
Neo-Scholasticism and US Democracy	199
CEIP and the Reorganization of the Vatican Library	204
Building the Alliance: The American Committee for the Vitoria Celebrations	211
The Vatican's Universal Sovereignty	215
The Inception of the Vitoria-Suárez Association between Academic Neo-Scholasticism and Catholic Activism	218
The Catholic Conception as a Collective Scholarly Enterprise	222
3. The Last Attempt: The Catholic Conception of International Law at the Vatican	225
Establishing the Catholic Conception: The Genealogy of Tyrannicide and the Salamancan Theories of International Organization	225
The Scott-Walsh Memorandum	231
The Catholic Conception and the Approaching War	237
The Conservative Legacy of the Catholic Conception	241
6 Apostles of Equality: James Brown Scott and the Feminist Cause	245
1. The Making of the US Feminist Movement and the National Woman's Party	245
A Room of Their Own	245
Feminism and the Suffrage Movement in the United States	248
"A Party to Free their Own Sex": The Anti-Democratic Campaigns and the Birth of the National Woman's Party	252

xiv TABLE OF CONTENTS

“Jailed for Freedom”: Paul, Stevens, and the Nineteenth Amendment	255
2. From the National to the International, from Suffrage to Equal Rights	260
Internationalist Feminism and Early Approaches to Scott	260
Scott and the Principle of Independent Nationality	266
The National Woman’s Party in the 1920s: From Suffrage to Equal Rights	278
3. Scott and the International Equal Rights Campaign	283
The 1928 Pan-American Conference and the Beginning of the Scott–Stevens Collaboration	283
“Unprogressive Codification of Nationality at The Hague”	292
Victory at Montevideo: Scott and the Stevens Treaties	299
Vitoria and the Equal Rights Treaties: The Unbearable Lightness of Scott’s Equality	305
Concluding Remarks. The Legacy of James Brown Scott and the Responsibilities of International Legal History	312
Bibliography	321
Index	339