

Contents

List of Abbreviations	xvii
1. Introduction: Economic Analysis, Democratic Procedure, and Distributinal Assessment in Environmental Policy	1
1.1 Establishing a Role for Distributinal Assessment in Environmental Policy	1
1.2 The Rise of Economics and Democratic Procedure in Environmental Policy	8
1.3 Capabilities Theory as a Normative Basis for Policy Evaluation and Design	16
1.4 Synopsis of Chapters	21
2. Valuation, Justification, and Participation in Contemporary Environmental Policy	27
2.1 Introduction	27
2.2 Environmental Valuation and Policy Justification in Current Practice	29
2.3 Valuing the Environment as an Object of Individual Choice	34
2.4 Valuing the Environment as an Object of Collective Choice	45
2.5 Aggregating Preferences as Justification for Environmental Protection	50
2.6 Democratic Deliberation as Justification for Environmental Protection	53
2.7 Conclusion	59
3. Capabilities, Well-Being, and Social Justice	62
3.1 Introduction	62
3.2 Capabilities Theory	65
3.2.1 Capabilities and well-being	65
3.2.2 Capabilities, social justice, and self-defined choice	70
3.3 Expanding Well-Being to Include the Environment	79
3.3.1 Revealing differential impacts and capability conflict	84
	xiii

Contents

---

3.3.2 Corrosive disadvantages, fertile functionings, and environmental protection	91
3.4 Conclusion	94
4. A Capabilities Approach to Environmental Valuation	97
4.1 Introduction	97
4.2 Contextualizing Current Practice: Ecology and Democracy in Environmental Valuation	99
4.3 What to Value	108
4.4 How to Value	118
4.4.1 Value identification	120
4.4.2 Value measurement	122
4.5 Conclusion	125
5. A Capabilities Approach to Policy Justification	126
5.1 Introduction	126
5.2 Justice as Capabilities: A Goal for Environmental Policy	130
5.3 The Capabilities Approach as a Theory of Justice for Policy Evaluation	132
5.3.1 The problem of capability conflicts	137
5.3.2 Establishing capability ceilings to resolve capability conflicts	142
5.3.3 Policy reasoning in a threshold-ceiling framework	147
5.3.4 Applying a threshold-ceiling framework to domestic air quality policy	153
5.4 Ecological Thresholds and the Limits of Justice	159
5.5 Conclusion	164
6. A Capabilities Approach to Democratic Participation in Regulatory Rulemaking	166
6.1 Protecting Capabilities as Administrative Practice	166
6.2 The Institutional Context of Democratized Rulemaking	172
6.3 Substantive Moments in Democratic Law	180
6.4 Environmental Justice as a Substantive Moment in Democratic Law	183
6.5 Democracy and Justice as Constraining Expertise	188
6.6 Conclusion: Socially Just Rulemaking as a Condition of Democracy	195
7. Conclusion: Climate Justice, Political Capabilities, and the Future of Human Fellowship	199
7.1 The Capabilities Approach and Environmental Policy	199
7.2 From Development Rights to Emissions Shares	203

	Contents
7.3 From Political Participation to Political Capabilities	208
7.4 From Mutual Advantage to Global Fellowship	210
Appendix: Martha Nussbaum's List of Central Human Functional Capabilities	215
Bibliography	217
Index	235