

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
Some challenges for legal education	4
About legal research	6
And so many other issues	8
Are deans responsible?	8
Some methodological remarks	12
1 Law schools: some preliminary sketches	16
1.1 Law schools in all shapes and sizes	16
1.2 The United States and the United Kingdom	16
1.3 The European continent	19
1.4 Asia	25
1.5 Australia	29
1.6 Latin America	30
1.7 Africa	31
1.8 Some conclusions	37
2 Universities and their strategic challenges	40
2.1 ‘Universitas: what a proud word!’	40
2.2 Funding of the universities	43
2.3 Widening participation: massification, diversification, privatisation and marketisation	47
2.4 Diversification in research and the triple helix challenge	55
2.5 Between institutional autonomy and state regulation	61
2.6 Academics versus managers	66
2.7 Globalisation and internationalisation of higher education and research	68
2.8 Size and scope: collaboration in higher education	77
2.9 Scientific integrity and the league tables: ever more writing, or more reading?	80

3	Law school in search of identity	88
3.1	The 'odd man out' in the university?	88
3.2	Should 'law' be in the university?	89
3.3	Is law an academic discipline?	92
3.4	Is law an international discipline?	101
3.5	Does law need other disciplines?	109
3.6	Producing academics or professionals?	114
3.7	Tapping poor law students: education for profit?		116
3.8	Values	120
4	Educating law students	130
4.1	'As university that world was known'	130
4.2	What makes a good lawyer?	133
4.3	An excursion into medicine	139
4.4	Knowledge and understanding, attitude and skills		141
4.5	Conclusions and outlook	149
5	Pedagogy: teaching law students	153
5.1	Some grounds for concern?	153
5.2	Teaching and learning	155
5.3	Do students differ?	157
5.4	The case dialogue method	162
5.5	Reading: what makes a good textbook for freshers?	169
5.6	The challenge of mass education: the Leiden project		177
5.7	Taking teaching seriously	182
5.8	Conclusions and outlook	189
6	Legal scholarship: venerable and vulnerable		200
6.1	One question, nine answers	200
6.2	Is 'law' a science?	202
6.3	What makes legal scholarship vulnerable?	205
6.4	Three perspectives on legal research	212
6.5	Our common concern for law as an academic discipline	216
6.6	Conclusions and outlook	228
7	Lawyers' ways of publishing	231
7.1	Goodbye to law reviews?	231
7.2	The editors: student- or peer-run journals?	237
7.3	Law journals: accessibility, quality, impact and readership		242
7.4	Goodbye to law books?	248

7.5	Towards an international community of legal scholars	251
7.6	Conclusions and outlook	260
8	Law schools' economic and societal impact	263
8.1	Legal scholarship: no longer a matter of life and death	263
8.2	Do universities have a third mission?	263
8.3	The world's 'grand challenges'	267
8.4	International legal cooperation: the example of Albania	269
8.5	Law and the city: the local impact of law schools	279
8.6	Conclusions and outlook	286
9	Whose law school is it?	290
9.1	Universities under attack?	290
9.2	The academics?	294
9.3	The students (and their parents) as consumers?	300
9.4	Our future: the PhD students?	308
9.5	The alumni and benefactors?	314
9.6	Nobody? University as a public good	321
10	Creating creativity in the law school	325
10.1	The three princes of Serendib	325
10.2	Towards a serendipitous microenvironment	328
10.3	Leadership = Being there	332
10.4	Creating creativity = Creating diversity	338
10.5	The importance of food and drink	344
10.6	Conclusions and outlook	345
11	Governing law schools: strategy, leadership and collegiality	347
11.1	The importance of having a strategy	347
11.2	'Deaning'	351
11.3	Collegiality and shared leadership	356
11.4	Managing professionals?	359
11.5	My own five golden rules	362
11.6	Conclusions and outlook	364
12	Towards a common agenda for law schools: some conclusions	367
12.1	The eternal themes of teaching, scholarship and service	367
12.2	Where law schools differ	368
12.3	What law schools have in common	372

12.4	Opportunities for governance	376
12.5	Opportunities for our research	380
12.6	Opportunities for our education	382
12.7	Conclusion: rethinking the law school	386

Glossary 390

Bibliography 403

Index 434