

Contents

1 Anthropological and Economic Foundations of FairEconomy as a Free Market System	1
1.1 Cultural premises	1
1.1.1 The meaning of economy. The fund theory	1
1.1.2 Culture and environment	4
1.2 Societal premises	4
1.3 Methodological premises	8
1.3.1 The Martin-Rössler-Problem. Formalism or substantivism? Two determinisms and the role of empiricism	8
1.3.2 The Jerry-Moore Problem. Inherent structures or open, but cautious generalizations?	12
1.4 Dogmatic contours	13
1.4.1 On reading and misquoting Adam Smith's theoretical propositions	13
1.4.2 The environment- and culture-conscious free and fair market economy, its institutional character, and its societal elasticity limits	19
1.4.3 New economic institutionalism	23
1.4.4 Markets	26
1.4.5 A principled basis for free and fair economics	29
1.4.6 The social aspects of the invisible hand	35
1.5 Links between freedom and fairness of a market economy, and the risk and liability mechanism (a preview of Chapters 2 to 4)	44
1.6 Conclusion	45
2 Rules on Competition after the Crisis	49
2.1 Freedom needs regulation	49
2.1.1 The two dimensions of freedom	50
2.1.2 Systemic regulation	51
2.1.3 Challenges to the freedom principle	52
2.1.4 Market requirements and market failures	55
2.1.5 Summary	57
2.2 Rethinking competition rules	57
2.2.1 Competition and market power	58
2.2.2 Competition law enforcement in financial markets	59
2.2.3 Competition rules for a finance-driven economy	63
2.2.4 Summary	71
2.3 Markets need fairness	72
2.3.1 Three characteristics of fairness	72
2.3.2 Fairness, freedom and market failures	75

2.3.3	Challenges to the fairness principle	78
2.3.4	Fairness as an international concept	80
2.3.5	Summary	82
2.4	Unfair financial transactions	82
2.4.1	The enforcement lacuna	82
2.4.2	Starting Points	85
2.4.3	The concept of general clauses	88
2.4.4	Rules on fairness in financial transactions	89
2.4.5	Summary	92
3	A Matter of Risk and Balance –
	Discussing a System of Liability for Financial Products	95
3.1	Introduction	95
3.2	Principles	96
3.2.1	Products without product liability	96
3.2.2	Benefits of securities, exemption from liabilities	98
3.2.3	Two perspectives on risk: mathematics and behavior	99
3.2.4	Two types of agents: banks originating credits and entities issuing securities	100
3.2.5	A focus on the issuers	102
3.2.6	A change of paradigms: rationales for a system of strict liability on the part of the issuers	103
3.2.7	The basic features of a liability system for financial products	105
3.3	Setting incentives and shaping behavior	109
3.3.1	Incentives on both sides	110
3.3.2	Advantages of private enforcement	110
3.4	Concrete contents	111
3.4.1	Applicability	111
3.4.2	Conditions for liability	112
3.4.3	Limits to liability	125
3.4.4	Distribution of risk	127
3.5	Summarizing conclusions	128
3.5.1	General consequences for the buyer	128
3.5.2	The general clause	128
3.5.3	Strict liability of the issuer	129
3.5.4	Lessons from and for the crisis	129
4	Sanctions and Procedure	131
4.1	The normative framework	131
4.1.1	International Treaties	132
4.1.2	Self-executing general clauses. Direct application	134
4.1.3	Possible sanctions	136
4.2	Sanctions under contracts and torts law, including rules of equity	138
4.2.1	The universal meaning of prima facie tort theory of liability	138
4.2.2	Breach of statutory duty – the tort action of avail	140

4.2.3 Torts, contracts, and criminal law (and equity) 142

4.2.4 Recent developments in democratic theory and politics and their impact on private litigation in legal-economic affairs . . 142

4.2.5 Public law interventions aiming at preventing,
mitigating and curing crises into private law creations
such as corporations and contracts 144

4.2.6 Single or class actions. Blocking laws. Ordre public 146

4.3 Summary 146

5 Conclusion: the Concept of FairEconomy 149

Index 151