

Contents

Introduction: Starting the Conversation	1
Foundations for Receptivity: Thinking About the Where and the How of Police Work
Step One: Appreciation of Evidence in the Business of Policing	9
Where Do You Find Yourself and Your Development/Engagement with Operational Decisions?	11
Step Two: Recognising the Usefulness of the Logic of Problem Solving	15
Step Three: Digging Down and Understanding the Problem and Its Context	19
Step Four: A Thinking Professional	23
Step Five: Binding the Problem Solving—Implementation	25
Example or Thought Exercise	26
Now You Have Begun, in Summary	26
The Case for Programme Integrity in Police Craft: You Can't Do Science Without Being Systematic
Example 1: An Evaluation of a Reducing Gang Violence Project—The 'Pathways Initiative'	29
Example 2: Evaluating a 'Diamond' Approach to Integrated Offender Management	33
Evaluation in the Eye of the Storm: Reflections on the Diamond Evaluation	37

Influencing Programme Integrity from the Inside ... and Widening the Conversation Outside 41

Final Thoughts on Programme Integrity 43

Embracing the Challenges in Professionalising the Police Profession: Learning to Work with Evidence Differently

The Challenge in Making Effective Research Influence Policing..... 47

Nudging the Police: Rank and Parochial Stubbornness..... 53

Devoting Time to Persuasion: Communication and Challenging Business as Usual 57

The Need for Standards of Evidence Within Evidence-Based Policing 59

What Should Be the Balance Between ‘Craft Experience’ and ‘Scientific Evidence’ 63

Training, Time and Technical Ability to Allow Breathing Space for Evidence-Based Policing..... 65

A Demanding Job: Why Don’t We Have the Time to Read?..... 67

Technical Ability of More than Police Officers 69

And Finally, Over to You 73

References..... 75

Index..... 79